

Marker ABCs

A clicker is a small device that makes a “click” sound when pressed. If you like the idea of the clicker but you find that you are “all thumbs” using it, you can use a special word instead of the click. A good choice is the word “YESSS!” As soon as your dog does something you like you can say “YESSS!” and then give him a treat.

You can use it as a way of letting your puppy know exactly when he has done something right. If you give your dog a reward (food, treat, game) after each mark, he will learn to LOVE the sound of the marker. The marker sound will come to mean “REWARD TIME!”

Why bother using a marker sound when your dog does something right? There are two good reasons.

- 1) Sometimes the behavior we want to reward happens so quickly that it is hard to reward the dog fast enough. A good example of this is loose-leash walking. We want to let the puppy know EXACTLY when he is walking in the right spot – alongside us with a loose leash. Marking at the very moment he is doing the right thing, and then giving him his reward, helps him learn the correct behavior more quickly.
- 2) Sometimes the puppy is a distance away from you when he does the right thing - for example: sitting to be petted instead of jumping up on a stranger at the far side of the dog park, or crossing the living room to pick up a dog toy rather than chewing on the shoe right next to him. Your puppy needs to know when his good behavior has earned him a reward – and you can do that by quickly marking while your pup is at a distance, and then giving your puppy the well-earned reward afterward.

Summary of Key Points for Marker Training:

- ✓ Mark only when your dog has done something you like, otherwise you are reinforcing behavior you don't want
- ✓ Whenever you mark you must reward the dog as soon as possible afterward, with a treat or a favorite game
- ✓ Instead of a clicker you can use the verbal marker “YESSS!”
- ✓ Do not mark the dog to get his attention, mark him when he is already paying attention to you.

Click & Treat is an excellent clicker training site.